

The NAEMT's

Psychological Trauma in EMS Patients beta course*

Hosted by: LaGuardia Community College

February 12, 2017 8:30AM – 5:00PM

About PTEP: Through the use of case-based lectures, highly interactive student activities, and realistic scenario stations, this course prepares providers to integrate specific interventions designed to mediate patient psychological trauma on all ambulance responses. The evidence based content reviews the physiological and psychological effects that occur when patients and family members experience an emergency situation requiring EMS involvement.

These events can leave lasting emotional scars. Along with patients, EMS providers experience a variety of psychological trauma due to the nature of EMS work. This course addresses psychological trauma and the integral role that EMS providers play in mitigating the long-term effects on patients. The course also includes a section designed to help identify stressors EMS providers experience and how to seek help.

Successful completion of this course will result in an NAEMT certificate and 8-hours of CAPCE accredited CEUs.

You must attend the entire course to receive any CEUs.

What is a Beta Course? This course has just finished the initial development phase. The NAEMT beta tests courses so instructors can evaluate the flow of teaching and to gather valuable feedback from providers about ways to improve the course overall. Your comments help make this course the best possible.
